Understand the similarities and differences between four seminal methodologies: Six Sigma, Lean, Reengineering and BPM. Do exercises for techniques and discuss cases in each methodology.

This course provides an overview of various methodologies and approaches commonly used in process improvement and management. Participants will understand the similarities and differences between Six Sigma, Lean, Reengineering and BPM. Exercises and case studies are used to reinforce the guiding principles and frameworks for each of the four methodologies.

The course places special emphasis on understanding process improvement techniques for the definition, modeling, analysis, improvement and management of business processes. Eleven different techniques are explained, each from one of the different methodologies. Participants learn where and how to best apply a given methodology or approach during the different BPM stages.

Case studies provide discussion of real life situations from the instructor and participants; exercises provide opportunities to practice the techniques. Participants are encouraged to think about how to apply the different methodologies and techniques in their work environments. Since the course is focused on process management methods the student should have a basic understanding of BPM prior to attending. This basic understanding can be obtained by attending BPM 101.
